Tenants evicted from infamous 'House of Pain'

By Brenda Bunting

Belle Glade—Things are quiet today at the infamous rooming house known as the 'House of Pain.'

City officials evicted the last eight tenants this week and boarded up the three-story building at 416 S.W. Avenue B Place.

Notoriously, the building has been known as a place where drug addicts smoke crack cocaine and prostitutes ply their trade.

Tenants have also been accused by neighbors of luring children as young as 10 into the building to perform sexual acts for ice cream and candy.

Neighbors said they were relieved to see something done about the situation.

"I've got boys 12 and 15 years old," said Jose Lawrence in April. "I'll be glad to see this place closed down. I've been afraid for my boys."

Teams from the police, sheriff and fire departments, as well as the Palm Beach County Health Department and code enforcement went into the boarding house April 10 after City Manager Lomax Harrelle got a complaint from a citizen.

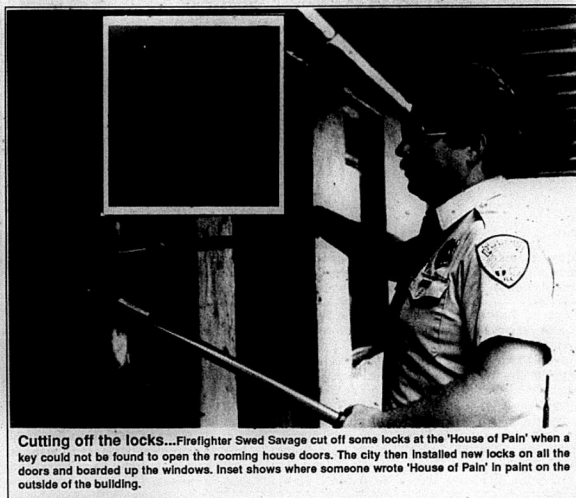

"We decided to act immediately, especially after we heard that children as young as the fifth and sixth grade were being lured into this building for prostitution and narcotics," Harrelle said.

They found numerous code violations and labeled the place a "Dangerous Building," and a "Public Nuisance."

Belle Glade's Planning and Building Administrator Gene Simmons notified the owner, David "Sonny" Fowler that the building was to be vacated and demolished within thirty days.

Electricity to the building was disconnected July 10 and the water was shut off this week.

Cutting off the locks...Firefighter Swed Savage cut off some locks at the 'House of Pain' when a key could not be found to open the rooming house doors. The city then installed new locks on all the doors and boarded up the windows. Inset shows where someone wrote 'House of Pain' in paint on the outside of the building.

Brochure is ready on historic sites in Glades SWIM plan grows more complex

Plans for preserving historic structures in Canal Point and Lake Harbor are completed. A brochure has been made providing tours of historic sites around Lake Okeechobee.

The preservation and restoration plan for Canal Point will be part of a proposal asking the state to nominate part of the community as an historic district listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The proposal offers the opportunity to recognize the significance of the lake Okeechobee area to the nation's heritage. According to Vicki Silver, with the Palm Beach County Planning Division, the proposal will be considered by the state later this year.

Planners say if the proposal is approved, it will not impose any regulations on private property owners, but will provide some benefits such as federal tax credits on income-producing property, and protection from federally-funded projects such as state road improvements.

The preservation and restoration plan for Lake Harbor includes a plan to promote the town's historic resources to stimulate the local

As mandated by state statute, South Florida Water management District (SFWMD) is in the process of updating the Lake Okeechobee Surface Water Improvement and Management (SWIM) Plan. The new version contains more elements than did the interim plan which the district has used since 1989.

That plan basically used only two elements: Water Quality and Public Information. Five more elements have been added with their goals, objectives and strategies. They are: Environmental Resources, Water Supply, Flood Protection, Recreation and Navigation.

In the coming issues, each element will be detailed as to the proposals being made by district staff in the current draft of the update plan.

Lake Okeechobee, the second largest freshwater lake in the United States, is a large, shallow eutrophic lake covering the area of 735 square miles. The average depth of the lake is nine feet and the storage capacity for water is estimated at 1.5 trillion gallons, according to a description contained in the draft of the updated plan.

The lake is considered integral as a backup water supply for the coastal counties and also for south Florida's flood control system.

The drainage basin covers more than 4,600 square miles. Rainfall is the primary source of

Moore Sportscards opens

By Brenda Bunting

Daniel Holt has been collecting sports cards since he was a young child, so when his mother and her husband decided to open Moore Sportscards, he fit right in the business.

"He's the expert," says his mother, Norma Moore. "He's training us."

David and Norma Moore opened their sports card business this month in the Town Square Plaza, around the corner from Dino's Pizza. Already, they say business is good.

"Truckers driving by see our sign and turn around and come back to see what we have," said

Mrs. Moore.

But, the Moore's say 80 percent of their business is kids and they welcome the youth who show so much enthusiasm for collecting.

"This is good for the kids and it gives them something to do," said Mr. Moore, who adds that he has a lot of fun with the kids when they come in the store.

The Moore's buy, sell and trade baseball, basketball, football and a small amount of hockey cards.

"Kids come in here, eight, nine years old, and they're geniuses," said Mrs. Moore. "They know what a card is going for without even looking."

Danny says everyone seems to have their favorite players they collect and he's no exception.

He likes Mark McGwire, Carl Ripkin, and Ken Griffey, Jr., just to name a few.

The family goes to card shows to pick up popular cards as well as buying wholesale. They hope to branch out and sell race cars and comic books in the future.

"Things are picking up," says Mr. Moore. "Word is spreading about our business."

Each Saturday they have a drawing and give away different prizes.

Moore Sportscard is in the Town Square, 1100 N. Main Street, Suite 105, Belle Glade. They are open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m.

Russians agree to buy Glades grown citrus

By Rick Schuster

"They were like kids in a candy store," said Hendry County citrus grower William R. "Chops" Hancock, Jr., of the reaction of the people of Russia to what he said was the first shipment of fresh citrus fruit from Florida since the Stalin era.

During a press briefing held on July 9, Mr. Hancock outlined the project that began more than a year ago to secure new markets for citrus grown in the area.

Mr. Hancock and his business partner Lee Akkerman, a Russian business man now living in Miami, have entered into an agreement to ship an estimated $100 million worth of fresh citrus fruit, single-strength juice and frozen juice concentrate to Russia beginning in the fall of this year.

The citrus, juice and concentrate will be sold in Russia through a number of different food distributors. Several of them were at the briefing, getting a first hand look at the citrus operations of Hancock-Fidelity, Ltd., and the soon to be opened packing house near Clewiston that is co-owned by Dole Citrus and Hancock-Fidelity.

Mr. Hancock said that setting up business deals in Russia was even more complex than most people could ever imagine. With Mr. Akkerman's assistance, he had to set up six joint ventures in Russia, and had to give away minority shares to the people in authority to gain their permission.

The citrus products will be shipped under the brand name All-American Classic, a division of the All-American Citrus Corporation, set up by Mr. Hancock to keep the arrangements separate from his partnership in Hancock-Fidelity, Ltd.

On April 28, a sample shipment of 6,000 boxes of Valencia oranges were shipped from Florida to the Russian port of St. Petersburg.

"Much of the fruit was snatched up right from the dock," said Mr. Hancock. "We had people, from 70 and 80 years old to children, who had never seen an orange."

According to Mr. Hancock, who has made several trips to Russia while negotiating the agreement, it is like a new product for them. The few citrus products that have been available to them came from Israel, Morocco, Egypt, Spain and Cuba.

"What they have been getting, when they can get it, is of inferior quality to what we can ship to them," he said.

The Florida Department of Citrus reports that much of the citrus delivered to the former Soviet-bloc countries came from Cuba in trade for military support and financial assistance.

Calling the first $100 million order a "drop in the bucket," Mr. Hancock said Russia is a "wide-open market for Florida citrus."

Mr. Hancock said Hancock-Fidelity will not be able to grow enough fruit, and the Dole Citrus/Hancock Fidelity packing house will not be able to pack enough by themselves to supply the Russian market.

"We will be able to take care of about half of what is needed," he said, "the rest of the juice, concentrate and fresh fruit will be obtained from other growers and processors in the state."

Ron Hamill of Gulf Coast Citrus said his organization, representing 148 growers and more than 110,000 acres of citrus in Florida, was very pleased to hear about the arrangement.

"It will help to get the world focusing on the top quality citrus being grown on the Gulf Coast," he said.

Mr. Hamill said many of the organizations growers have been looking into trade deals with Eastern Europe seeking a stable outlet for their citrus.

According to Mr. Akkerman, Mr. Hancock has definitely found a growing market for Florida citrus products with the Russian people.

"They have an enormous appetite for citrus," he said. "It is a frozen country, and you cannot grow any citrus there. The people will definitely buy it."

Citrus bound for Russia will leave Hendry County for the Port of Jacksonville. From there it is shipped to the port city of St. Petersburg in Russia, and then trucked to Moscow for distribution. The entire trip, from grove to table, should take less than one month.

The talk of the demand for the product brings a smile to Mr. Hancock's face. Mr. Akkerman said that as the exclusive supplier of citrus, All-American might just become the Dole or Tropicana of Russia.

Jerrika McClorin placed first with a score of 2926 for a new state record (Gold medal).

In the midget age group, April Jones placed second with a score of 2402 (Silver Medal).

In the midget age group, Faryl Morris placed 4 with a score of 2155.

Both teams from the Glades made the coast acutely aware that we are alive and well and grow some of the best athletes in the State of Florida and in the world.

All eight girls from the Glades Track Club as well qualified for the National Junior Olympic Championship at Mount San Antonio College in Walnut, California from July 28th to August 3. economy through small-scale tourist development.

Old U.S. 27 would also function as a scenic bicycle path, and old buildings would be renovated and converted to specialty shops, a community center and a farm museum.

The plan looks to redirect travelers at John Stretch Park toward the community via landscaping and a series of signs informing visitors about the lake, local history, and the area's "Cracker Style" architecture.

A campground scheduled to be opened by the County Parks Department at the South Bay area point by mid-1993 could generate demand for these proposed attractions, according to Silver.

She said both plans include optional design guidelines so new construction and renovation can conform to historic architectural styles of each community.

Both the preservation plans and the printing of the brochure were funded by grants from the Florida Department of State, Bureau of Historic Preservation, assisted by the state's Historic Preservation Advisory Council.

The brochure was written by the Palm Beach County-based historic preservation consulting firm, Research Atlantic and funded by the Florida Humanities Council, a non-profit organization based in Tampa.

A second printing, funded by state tourist grants to Glades and Martin Counties, will also describe historic sites in Indianwood.

The plans and brochures can be obtained by contacting Silver at 407-233-5313. The number can be reached toll-free through the West County Courthouse.

The local chapter of the American Red Cross helped find homes for three of the last eight tenants, according to Police Chief Michael Miller, and the Katherine Price Foundation gave temporary shelter to the other five. The Red Cross also found places for five other tenants after the electricity was shut off last Friday.

In a 33-page report, Simmons outlined the numerous violations in the building and said it would be "impossible for the petitioner to comply with the mandates" within the time frame of 30 days.

Police reports show that in the past two years there were 22 narcotic related arrests on the property, 27 reports of violence related crimes and nine reported property related crimes.

of water entering the lake which is estimated by district officials to be 39 percent.

The Kissimmee River contributes another third of the water and small tributaries such as Harney Pond, Indian Prairie, Fishcreek Creek and Taylor Creek and Nubbin Slough contribute the final third.

Outflows from the lake are through a series of canals to the south such as the Miami, North New River, Hillsboro and West Palm Beach. Water also flows out through the Caloosahatchee River on the west side of the lake and the St. Lucie Canal on the east side of the lake.

Two-thirds of the water (66%) leaves the lake through evapotranspiration, the report states.

The land use patterns around the lake are primarily agricultural, although many other land use patterns are recorded by the district in the draft plan. They include: urban land use; urban industrial land use; and urban institutional land use.

The Lake Okechobee SWIM planning area take in parts of eight different counties and also includes six municipalities. The counties include: Okechobee, Hendry, Highlands, Glades, Martin, Osceola, Palm Beach, Polk and St. Lucie.

The municipalities included in the planning area are: Okechobee, Moore Haven, Clewiston, Pahokee, Belle Glade and, South Bay.

When will they begin enforcing tinted window law?

Yes. Can you tell me when Belle Glade is going to start enforcing this new tint law on all these vehicles with the dark windows?

I wonder if you could get a hold of the Chief of Police and ask him when they are going to start enforcing it and make them get it off.

Editor's note: We did just that and here is Chief Miller's response.

"Actually, that law has been in effect for some time. At the present time, due to budget restraints, we do not have the piece of equipment that calibrates the amount of light that is reflected through the tinted windows.

I'll be honest with you, while I respect all the laws, this is not high on my list of priorities. We have more major concerns, such as crime and enforcing the seat belt laws. But, I will certainly look into the cost of obtaining this piece of equipment."

Guest Editorial

By Dr. Rafael Conte, M.D.

Editor's note:

Rafael Conte, M.D. has been serving as a Children's Psychiatric Consultant to the West County Mental Health Clinic since June 1.

In addition to providing one day a week coverage at the Clinic, Dr. Conte is on the staff of Charter Hospital of West Palm Beach and has opened a private practice in the West Palm Beach area.

Joseph Amato, Executive Director of the Clinic, has informed us that Dr. Conte is the first Board Certified Child Psychiatrist to serve the Glades area in at least 10 years.

Dr. Conte is writing in response to a Letter to the Editor in the June 18 issue in which a mother expressed her concerns over the drug Ritalin.

In reading the mother's letter about Ritalin, I can well understand her concerns. There is no mother I have seen that doesn't have feelings and fears about giving Ritalin to her child. The two most common ones I hear are: Is this medication addictive and will it make my child act like a "zombie"? The answer to both these questions is no. Ritalin does not cause physiological dependency and it is not a sedative.

What concerns me about the letter is its extreme bias and unfounded conclusions. It would be the equivalent of stating "penicillin (antibiotics) should never be used for infections no matter what the research indicates." The fact is that there has been a great deal of research on the treatment of hyperactive children (Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder - ADHD).

Three to five percent of school age children in the U.S. A. have this condition. A disorder of extreme inattention, impulsivity and overactivity. These are the kids that can't sit still; they move from one activity to the other; slight noises or movements catch their attention; they are constantly getting into some type of mischief; they don't seem to learn by their mistakes; parents can't seem to discipline them, its thought "only if they tried, they could do better" and they tend to leap before they look.

Only after organic or environmental reasons for this behavior have been ruled out will a doctor make treatment recommendations. The American Academy of Pediatrics gives clearly defined treatment guidelines. The last of which is Ritalin. When it has been decided that medication is an option, 75% of the children respond well. Like any other medication, including aspirin, Ritalin does have side effects that need to be monitored.

The alternative of not treating ADHD can be devastating to the child's self esteem. Imagine being told all your life that you're lazy or a bad kid; wondering why you can't seem to be successful in school no matter how hard you try.

However, there is no cause for alarm. help is available and information is accessible so parents can make an informed decision on what is best for their child.

Study shows Florida ranks 1st in Southeast in school spending

Contrary to popular perception, a new study released May 28th by the James Madison Institute shows that Florida spends more per pupil in the public schools than any other Southeastern state. The 28-page study is entitled Comparing Spending and Performance in Florida's Public Schools and Colleges.

The authors, James D. Gwartney and Russel Sobel, economists at Florida State University, and J. Stanley Marshall, Chairman of the James Madison Institute, found that Florida spent an average of $4,563 per pupil in 1989, the latest year for which comparative statistics are available.

After adjusting for cost-of-living differences, Florida's school spending is 3 percent above the national average, and ranks first among ten Southeastern states. Compared with other populous states, Florida spends more than California, Illinois, Ohio, and Texas, but less than New York and Pennsylvania.

The authors note, however, that relatively high spending has not resulted in improved educational performance. Florida's high school dropout rate is the worst in the nation and its standardized test scores are in the bottom 40 percent of comparable states.

According to John W. Cooper, President of the James Madison Institute, "This study shows that more money is not the solution to Florida's education problems. Instead, the authors suggest decentralization, eliminating administrative waste, and 'educational choice' reforms that would allow parents the opportunity to choose the schools their children attend and would require schools to compete for students."

The James Madison Institute is a non-partisan, non-profit research organization based in Tallahassee, Florida. The study is the latest of the Institute's "Backgrounders," a series of research reports that address a broad range of policy issues.

Toma De La Bastilla

14 de Julio 1789

Se designa con este nombre el amotinamiento de la ciudad de París que culminó en el ataque, la toma y la destrucción, de la notable prisión-fortaleza. La fecha de su caída es "El día de la Bastilla", fiesta Nacional, de Francia. Conmemora el inicio de la Revolución Francesa, cuya influencia, al llevar nuevas ideas, hubo de sentirse en muchos lugares de Europa.

Por lo que debió de haber sido y no fue: lección para los tiranos de todos los tiempos, entre ellos el decadente Asesino de Cuba, damos unas vueltas a la Historia.

La construcción de la Fortaleza, a la puerta de San Antonio, se remonta al año 1369. Sus espesas murallas y sus ocho grandes torres estaban rodeadas por un foso de 7 metros de ancho. En las torres se construyeron docenas de celdas miserables. (No deben de haber sido peores que "Las gabelas", un metro de ancho por 3 mts. de largo construidas por el Tirano Castro en la prisión de Tres Macías, en la cercanía de Bayamo, Provincia de Oriente).

Edificada con el propósito de defender la Ciudad, terminó siendo prisión para los que se atrevían a criticar al gobierno. Dentro de sus calabozos se consumieron las vidas de muchos presos, que tampoco, al igual que en nuestra Patria inmolada, volvieron a ver un rayo de sol.

Durante los 400 años de su existencia, la Bastilla encerró a muchos hombres famosos en sus torres. Uno de los mas notables de sus presos fue "Mascara de Hierro" romantica figura de la Historia que murió en la cárcel en 1703.

Sigue sin saberse hasta nuestros días quien fue ese hombre, aunque se ha atribuido a muchos su identidad y se han escrito muchas paginas al respecto.

Voltaire, el gran escritor cuyas obras contribuyeron notablemente a provocar la revolución en Francia, estuvo encarcelado en la Bastilla por algún tiempo.

Cientifican los pueblos en su cerebro la idea poderosa de la justicia, no importa cuan pesado sea el yugo que el tirano le haya impuesto sobre la frente. Esas nubes de lagrimas que parecen vedar a los ojos la luz de la emancipación terminan por desgarrarse; las lagrimas se convierten en rayo que nivela y que fulmina y el yugo cae.

El pueblo de París ya no podía soportar las injusticias de que era víctima. Y aquella mañana memorable (ante cuyo recuerdo tiemblan los tiranos) del 14 de Julio de 1789, el pueblo se congregó en las calles. "Abajo la Bastilla" grito alguien. "La multitud enardecida avanzó hacia la prisión, arremetiendo furiosa contra las puertas y libero a los presos.

La Bastilla fue demolida y en su lugar se levanta un monumento a la Libertad. La Revolución Francesa había comenzado.

Resquebrajados los cimientos del castratinismo, sobre Cuba tambien se proyecta el Día de su Libertad. El Tirano esta pidiendo sangre, y la tendra.

St. Petersburg, Russia....All American Citrus Corporation executives and Russian executives of a major food distributor in St. Petersburg, Russia, are shown with a box of All American Classic fresh oranges. All American exported the first shipment of Florida citrus in volume to the Russian Federation in recent history. All American Citrus Corporation President William R. "Chops" Hancock, Jr., shown third from left, called their agreement "the beginning of a new era of food distribution to the Russian people for the Florida citrus industry."

Local grower ships to Russia

Moscow--Thousands of citrus grown in Florida, Russians had a sparse supply of fruit from a few other countries, however, none was in adequate supply.

For the first time in recent history, a Florida-based citrus producer, All American Citrus Corporation, has successfully exported citrus to Russia.

"Our success inaugurates a new era of cooperation between ourselves and our neighbors in Russia," said All American Citrus Corporation founder and president W.R. "Chops" Hancock, Jr. of Clewiston.

"It is a two-way relationship," said Mr. Hancock. "Russian people have for the first time in recent history the finest fresh oranges in the world in their markets, and we have established a new and very important market for citrus in all popular forms," Mr. Hancock said.

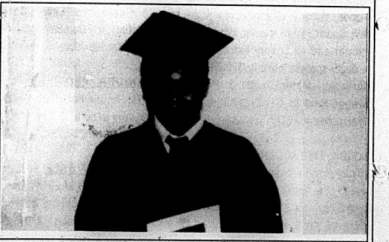

The corporation successfully moved a volume of fresh citrus from the Port of Jacksonville to the Port of St. Petersburg in Russia. Joint ventures with two important food distributors, one in St. Petersburg and the other in Moscow, completed the marketing operation. Working hand in hand, the All American group in the United States and their Russian counterparts in the Russian cities created the first of what is expected to be a very large volume of citrus distribution in Russia.

Prior to the introduction of citrus grown in Florida, Russians had a sparse supply of fruit from a few other countries, however, none was in adequate supply. Thousands of boxes of freshly picked Valencia oranges from southwest Florida carrying the bright red, white, and blue label of All American Classic were loaded onto the "Sea Land Quattro" a 370,000-ton ocean going freighter. The fruit was delivered to distributors in St. Petersburg and Moscow which, in turn, has distributed it throughout their markets. "The fruit arrived in wonderful condition and distribution began almost immediately," said the Russian distributor in Moscow. "Our products are exactly the same as those available in the United States. Our intention is to make these healthy, nutritious premium quality food products available in large volumes at affordable prices for the Russian People," said Mr. Hancock.

Mr. Hancock, who is a leading Florida fresh citrus grower, noted one of All American's advantages is its direct affiliation with Florida orange groves. It also marks an important milestone for the Florida Gulf Citrus Growers Association, of which Mr. Hancock is a founder and charter member. It was Gulf area citrus that was first to be shipped to the new Russian markets.
